A Voters Guide

(Everything you ever wanted to know about candidates and ballot propositions but could not find out from the ballot book)

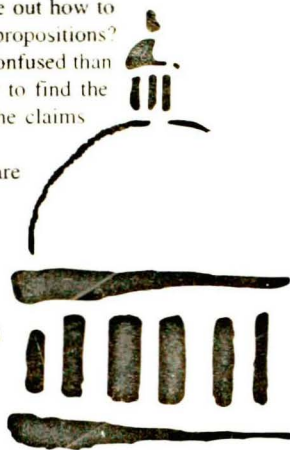

A Forum Publications Staff Report

Have you ever sat down with your ballot book and tried to figure out how to vote, quickly setting it aside when confronted with dozens of propositions? Ever sifted through the ballot arguments, only to emerge more confused than when you started? Have you sought out independent voter guides, only to find the ballot arguments merely summarized with no independent scrutiny of the claims and counter-claims?

There is no quality control on ballot arguments. Election officials are only obligated to publish them, not check them for accuracy or veracity.

Welcome to the Forum Publications' "Voters Guide for the Perplexed." The following analysis attempts to move beneath the rhetoric of the voter booklet, reporting who put the measures on the ballot, where they got their money and why they really want the measure passed.

We hope this information will shed a whole new light on the Nov. 5 election.

Prop. 204

Safe, Clean, Reliable Water Supply Act.

Would allow the state to sell $995 million in general obligation bonds to finance water projects, including infrastructure and pollution cleanup.

Likely Intent: Prop. 204 is an attempt to find solutions to California's water demand that business, agri-business and environmentalists can live with.

Possible Impacts: Most of the money will be spent in northern California, using technology and construction to get more water out of the Bay-Delta region without killing the ecosystem. A Peripheral Canal is not on the list of projects, but the stage might be set. Will cost Californians $1.8 billion after interest is paid.

Big Spenders: California Chamber of Commerce, Farm Bureau, Pacific Gas & Electric, Environmental Defense Fund and Nature Conservancy. There is no organized opposition, but the Libertarian Party, the Greens and others have argued general obligation bonds are fiscally foolish.

Endorsements: Tons, including chambers of commerce, farmers groups, labor unions (especially those who build water projects), banks, League of Women Voters, Sierra Club, State Senator Steve Peace and the San Diego Union-Tribune.

Prop. 205

Youthful and Adult Offender Local Facilities Bond Act of 1996.

Would allow the state to sell $700 million in general obligation bonds to finance building projects for local juvenile and adult correctional facilities.

Likely Intent: The passage of the "three strikes" law has led to a greater number of people jailed longer for offenses or waiting for three-strikes hearings. Facilities are overcrowded.

Possible Impacts: More jails, more debt: $1.25 billion after interest is paid.

Endorsements: California State Sheriffs' Assn., California Police Chiefs' Assn. and the California

District Attorneys' Assn.

Prop. 206

Veterans' Bond Act of 1996

Would allow the state to sell $400 million in general obligation bonds to provide farm and home loans to California veterans.

Likely Intent: To loan about 2,000 veterans money for homes and farms.

Possible Impacts: More vets with single-family homes. Taxpayers will be left holding whatever loans are not repaid.

Endorsements: veteran groups, realtors

Prop. 207

Attorneys Fees, Right to Negotiate, Frivolous Lawsuits.

Would allow attorneys and clients to negotiate the amount of attorneys' fees, whether fixed, hourly or contingent. Would prohibit attorneys from charging excessive fees and authorizes courts to impose sanctions on attorneys who file suits without merit or solely to harass opposing party.

Likely Intent: In the March election, Silicon Valley corporations were pitted against trial lawyers in Prop. 200, 201 and 202. Corporations wanted to limit lawsuits and lawyers are rather fond of them. Prop. 202 would have limited contingency fees, and Prop. 207 was written by trial lawyers in case 202 passed (it didn't).

Possible Impacts: The Legislature would have less regulatory control over attorney-client arrangements. Attorneys would not be able to collect fees if a case is deemed frivolous by the courts.

Big Spenders: The California Chamber of Commerce has sponsored the California Business PAC to oppose this and seven other initiatives. The battle with attorneys has been focused on Prop. 211, and the spending has been fierce.

10 Questions Nobody Else Asked the Candidates

In an age of soundbites and spin doctors, most candidates have precise, politically correct answers for all the usual questions. Character is always an issue — in somebody else's race. So we thought we'd ask our local candidates questions they might be asked at a party or social occasion if they weren't candidates. The answers might tell you more about them than anything they have to say about "the issues."

The 10 questions were:

1. What's your favorite movie of all time (pick one if you have several favorites)?
2. Who do you think should run for President but never has or probably won't?
3. What's your favorite sport to watch? To Play?
4. What are the titles of the last three books you've read?
5. State the meaning of life in 25 words or less.
6. If America is the greatest country in the world, which do you think comes in second?
7. When's the last time you dressed up for Halloween? What were you?
8. When you were in elementary school (third to sixth grade or so), what did you want to be when you grew up?
9. Which Biblical character (if any) do you identify with?
10. If you weren't running for office this year, which of the other candidates would you be voting for in your race?

Here's what they said.

Lemon Grove School Board

Jerry Jones

1. "Empire of the Sun"
2. Lee Iacocca
3. Auto Racing
4. Users Guide To Paradox for Windows, FA Flight Regulations, "1996-97 Preliminary Budget for School Board"
5. To work and struggle and to leave something behind — in my case, my children.
6. England — they own all the money.
7. This year, probably be a race car driver
8. Aerospace engineer
9. Noah
10. Robbie Montgomery

Hey, Big Spender!

Some people vote. Some people run for office. Others give money to political campaigns. Only 12 Lemon Grove residents contributed enough to a congressional, presidential or other federal campaign to show up on records filed at the Federal Election Commission. Here they are:

M. Hoagland (General Atomics)	1,900	General Atomics PAC*

Steve Baldwin boasts extortion prowess

La Mesa: Voters opening the San Diego Union-Tribune's election coverage Sunday, October 20, were met by a surprisingly brazen threat from current state Assemblyman Steve Baldwin.

Remarking upon the additional support his opponent for the 77th District seat, Janet Gastil, may soon receive from the California Teachers Association (CTA) and other education groups, Baldwin boasted: "Being chair of the education committee, I'm the last guy they want to piss off. If they dumped a lot of money into the race and then lost, I could make their lives miserable."

Just how far he would go to fulfill his threat Baldwin did not say.

Baldwin's statement has been viewed by many as a form of extortion intended to prevent the CTA from exercising its right to participate in the political process. No one can recall a legislator so openly linking campaign contributions with legislative outcomes - otherwise known as "influence peddling."

Reaction to Steve Baldwin's threat has been widespread. Rolf Schulze, president of the California Faculty Association at San Diego State University responded, "As a teacher and a professor and as a member of an association affiliated with the California Teachers Association, I was deeply offended by Assemblyman Steve Baldwin's remark. Baldwin's statement, threatening retaliation against the CTA if they supported Janet Gastil, amounts to political blackmail. I not only found his remarks crude and intemperate, but most insulting to teachers and their representatives."

La Mesa - Spring Valley School Board member Ted Crooks said, "When I read what the Education Chairman of our assembly said about teachers - 'I'm the last guy they want to piss off' and 'I could make their lives miserable' - I worried a short time about his conceit, then I worried a long time about our children."

El Cajon teacher Margaret Carlson said, "Baldwin's threat strikes me as an expression of arrogance and intolerance.

When you think about it, you realize that Baldwin is trying to keep people from freely participating in the electoral process as they see fit. That's extortion. In the end, Baldwin's bullying will hurt no one more than the children of California."

CTA Vice President Wayne Johnson said of Baldwin, "His outrageous statement seems to indicate that he is using his position as chair of the Assembly Education Committee to exert political pressure against CTA and its members rather than viewing it as a responsibility to develop sound educational policy. Instead of arrogantly using his position as a platform to blast teachers and the organization that represents them, Mr. Baldwin should use his time to explain his positions and policies to voters."

"I plan to stand up for California teachers and all the other pro-education groups supporting me," said Baldwin's opponent, Janet Gastil. "We've got to show Baldwin that threats and intimidation are the tools of witch hunters, not mature, effective legislators."

Endorsements: Consumer Attorneys of California, Peace Officers Research Assn., Congress of California Seniors, Golden State Mobilehome Owners League, National Lawyers Guild

Prop. 208

Campaign Contributions and Spending Limits. Restricts Lobbyists.

Would limit a contributor's campaign contributions per candidate to $100 for districts of less than 100,000, $250 for larger districts, and $500 for statewide elections. Contribution limits would approximately double for candidates who agree to limit spending. Would prohibit lobbyists from making and arranging contributions to those they influence.

Likely Intent: Drafted by a broad coalition of "good government" groups to reduce the dominating role of money in politics. Oddly enough, the biggest opponent is the California Public Interest Research Group (CAL-PIRG), which is sponsoring a tougher measure the Prop. 208 folks feel will be thrown out in the courts.

Possible Impacts: Throw a few hurdles at politicians and campaign consultants who will be searching for ways to get around the new rules.

Big Spenders:

On the Pro Side: Common Cause and AARP have raised over $150,000 each in support. Another $100,000 came in from "Taxpayers for Better Education" in San Diego, a PAC associated with John Walton of Wal-Mart.

On the Anti Side: The California Chamber of Commerce is quietly opposing both campaign reform initiatives. It has sponsored a committee called "Citizens Against Flawed Reform" which has raised hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Endorsements: League of Women Voters, United We Stand America

Prop. 209

Prohibition Against Discrimination or Preferential Treatment by State and other Public Entities.

Generally prohibits the state, local government and public schools from discriminating against or giving preferential treatment to any individual or group on the basis of race, sex, color, ethnicity, or national origin.

Likely Intent: To do away with affirmative action programs, which were originally designed to help people in groups historically excluded from equal opportunity.

Possible Impacts: Significant dismantling of affirmative action. This one is being watched all over the country.

Big Spenders:

On the Pro Side: Californians Against Discrimination and Preferences have received enormous contributions from the California Republican Party and business interests all over the country.

On the Anti Side: The California Teachers Assn has donated more than $200,000 to the Campaign to Defeat 209. Public employee unions have kicked in more than $100,000. Hollywood types like Norman Lear and the Feminist Majority are raising money.

Endorsements: Pete Wilson, Bob Dole, Libertarian Party. Opponents include some 400 unions, ethnic and women's groups. Colin Powell opposes 209.

Prop. 210

Minimum Wage Increase.

Would increase the current state minimum wage of $4.25 per hour to $5.00 per hour on March 1, 1997, and then to $5.75 per hour on March 1, 1998.

Likely Intent: To raise the standard of living for minimum-wage workers.

Possible Impacts: Better wages for low-income workers who survive the layoffs threatened by companies seeking to maintain their profit levels.

Big Spenders:

On the Pro Side: The Liveable Wage Coalition is getting support from labor, consumer and business groups

On the Anti Side: The Alliance to Protect Small Businesses and Jobs is actually getting its money from big business. Corporations kicking in $50,000 or more include Philip Morris and PepsiCo (owners of Taco Bell, Kentucky Fried Chicken, Pizza Hut). Other benefactors include Air-Touch Cellular ($35,000+), Marriott Corporation ($25,000+), Wendy's, Burger King, McDonalds, In-N-Out Burger, IHOP and Domino's Pizza.

Endorsements: League of Women Voters, Congress of California Seniors, California Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, California Council of Churches

Prop. 211

Attorney-Client Fee Arrangements. Securities Fraud. Lawsuits.

Like Prop. 207, would prohibit restrictions on attorney-client fee arrangements. Would allow courts to prohibit excessive fees. Would prohibit deceptive conduct in purchase or sale of securities resulting in loss to institutional or personal retirement funds, savings. Would impose civil liability, including punitive damages, for losses.

Likely Intent: Welcome to "Bill Lerach versus Silicon Valley II," the sequel to last spring's Prop. 200-201-202 battle. Lerach is a San Diego attorney earning an estimated $10 million a year suing high-tech companies over alleged securities fraud. Lerach's strategy is to wait for a high-tech company's stock to drop 10-20 percent and then find a disgruntled investor to represent in a lawsuit.

Corporations fought back by trying to pass initiatives to limit contingency fees and shareholder class action suits. They failed, and now it's Lerach's turn. Prop. 211 would keep California state courts open to shareholder lawsuits that might not get heard in federal courts under new securities litigation law.

Possible Impacts: Would make it easier for shareholders to bring lawsuits against corporations and give more latitude to seniors suspecting fraud in retirement investments. As with Prop. 207, the Legislature could not regulate attorney-client fees.

Big Spenders:

On the Pro Side: This is being called the most expensive initiative battle in California history. Lerach and other attorneys have raised almost $10 million under the name "Citizens for Retirement Protection and Security." Lerach's own firm, Milberg & Weiss, has contributed more than $2 million. East Coast law firms have kicked in some $2.3 million. San Diego backers include Barrack, Rodos & Bacine ($376,230), Princeton Venture Research ($225,000), Finkelstein & Associates ($172,405) and Jeffrey Krinsk ($100,000).

On the Anti Side: The spending has only begun. Prop. 211's opponents, "Taxpayers Against Frivolous Lawsuits," have raised three times as much. The Securities Industry Assn out of New York has donated over $2 million. The top accounting firms, including Price Waterhouse, have contributed over $1 million a piece. The NASDAQ Stock Market is good for half a million. Local contributors include SAIC (around $100,000), Qualcomm ($50,000), Rohr ($25,000), SDG&E ($15,000) and General Atomics ($10,000).

Endorsements: Lerach has rounded up the sympathies of AARP, Congress of California Seniors, Golden State Mobilehome Owners League, SEIU, California Nurses Assn., California School Employees Assn., and the San Diego/Imperial Counties Labor Council. Opponents include the California Chamber of Commerce, California Taxpayers Assn., Farm Bureau, California Building Industry Assn., Assemblywomen Susan Davis and Dede Alpert, Assemblymen Steve Baldwin and Jan Goldsmith, Rep. Brian Bilbray and La Mesa Mayor Art Madrid.

Prop. 212

Campaign Contributions and Spending Limits. Repeals Gift and Honoraria Limits. Restricts Lobbyists.

Would limit individual contributions per candidate per election to $200 for statewide offices, $100 for most other offices. Would prohibit more than 25 percent of contributions from outside district. Would prohibit lobbyists from making/arranging contributions to those they influence.

Likely Intent: To set the stage for a legal challenge to the Supreme Court ruling that the First Amendment prohibits limits on campaign spending. CAL-PIRG split with Common Cause and the League of Women Voters (Prop. 208) to pursue tougher restrictions.

Possible Impacts: If it musters the courts, Prop. 212 would force politicians to launder out-of-district campaign contributions through real people in their districts. Passage would nullify Prop. 208.

Big Spenders: CALPIRG is running a lean, grassroots campaign with seeds of volunteers. As with Prop. 208, the big money is coming from "Citizens Against Flawed Reform," a PAC sponsored by the California Chamber of Commerce.

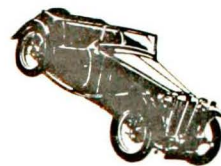

Endorsements: Jerry Brown, former Congressman William Dannemeyer, AFL-CIO, SEIU, California Teachers Assn., California Federation of Teachers, Congress of California Seniors and former Lemon Grove Mayor Bob Burns.

Prop. 213

Limitation on Recovery to Felons, Uninsured Motorists, Drunk Drivers.

Would deny recovery of damages to a convicted felon whose injuries were caused during the commission of the felony or immediate flight therefrom. Would deny recovery for non-economic damages (e.g., pain, suffering, disfigurement) to drunk drivers, if subsequently convicted, and to uninsured motorists.

Likely Intent: Although the initiative begins with talk about felons, the fact that state Insurance Commissioner Chuck Quackenbush is the sponsor indicates that the heart of the proposition is insurance issues. Quackenbush wants to give insurance companies a break and he's thrown in frivolous lawsuits by felons and drunk drivers to gain the support of law enforcement and anti-drunk driving groups, respectively.

Possible Impacts: Fewer lawsuits, minimal insurance settlements if one party is uninsured (even if an insured motorist is at fault), higher profits for insurance companies.

Big Spenders: Quackenbush's "Californians for Personal Responsibility" have received hundreds of thousands of dollars from insurance companies across the country. Recent benefactors include State Farm ($285,000), All State ($100,000) and Liberty Mutual ($20,000). The California Republican Party is also donating.

Endorsements: California Chamber of Commerce, Mothers Against Drunk Driving, League of California Cities, California State Sheriffs' Assn., Farm Bureau, Peace Officers Research Assn., Pacific Telesis. Opponents include Harvey Rosenfield (Prop. 103), Ralph Nader, Congress of California Seniors, Democratic, Libertarian and Green parties.

Prop. 214

Health Care. Consumer Protection.

Would prohibit health care businesses from discouraging health care professionals from informing patients or advocating for treatment. Would require health care businesses to establish criteria for authorizing or denying payments and provide for minimum safe and adequate staffing of health care facilities.

Likely Intent: There are two initiatives on the ballot dealing with HMO regulation — 214 and 216. They are both sponsored by health care industry workers, who, like the proponents of Prop. 208 and 212, split into two camps. The disagreement is between two rival health care worker unions, the Service Employees International Union (SEIU) with Prop. 214, and the California Nurses Association with 216. Prop. 214 is considered the more moderate of the two, establishing staffing requirements in the name of health over profits. Proponents of the stronger Prop. 216 suggest the SEIU is actually in league with the HMOs and qualified its initiative to help defeat 216.

Possible Impacts: The Department of Health Services would have new regulatory powers to determine "adequate staffing" and reduce an HMO's temptation to cut corners on health care.

Big Spenders:

On the Pro Side: "Californians for Patient Rights" is largely bankrolled by the SEIU, which paid more than $400,000 to get 214 on the ballot.

On the Anti Side: "Taxpayers Against Higher Health Costs" is a coalition of hospitals, insurance companies and HMOs which has raised over $5 million to defeat both Prop. 214 and 216. The California Healthcare Committee on Issues has donated some $1.5 million. Other benefactors include Health Net ($353,418), Pacificare of California ($311,891) and FHP ($186,610).

Endorsements: Health Access, AARP, Congress of California Seniors, California Teachers Assn., AFL-CIO, United Nurses Assn. of California. Opponents include California Chamber of Commerce, California Taxpayers Assn. and the Barona Indians.

Prop. 215

Medical Use of Marijuana.

Would allow possession or cultivation of marijuana for medical treatment recommended by a physician. Physicians would not be punished or denied any right or privilege for recommending marijuana to a patient for medical purposes.

Likely Intent: To make a major landmark in the gradual decriminalization of marijuana.

Possible Impacts: Would allow victims of cancer, AIDS, glaucoma, arthritis and other diseases to smoke marijuana for relief. Would not impact existing laws on recreational use.

Big Spenders: "Californians for Medical Rights," funded originally by millionaires George Soros, Peter Lewis, Lawrence Rockefeller and Men's Wearhouse owner George Zimmer, is well-heeled. They've raised over $1.8 million. Benefactors include University of Phoenix CEO John Sperling ($200,000), Life AIDS Lobby ($194,000) and every NORML (National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws) chapter in the country.

Endorsements: physicians and nursing groups. Opposition from law enforcement, with condemnations from former presidents Gerald Ford, Jimmy Carter and George Bush, and former Surgeon General C. Everett Koop.

Prop. 216

Health Care, Consumer Protection. Taxes on Corporate Restructuring.

Would prohibit health care business from discouraging health care professionals from informing patients or advocating for treatment. Would impose new taxes and establish a non-profit corporation to advocate for health care consumers.

Likely Intent: To seriously regulate the health industry and put health care ahead of profits.

Possible Impacts:

Mandated staffing levels, new taxes on mergers and for-profit conversions, and a new bureaucracy to enforce health over profits.

Big Spenders:

On the Pro Side: "Consumers and Nurses for Patient Protection" is sponsored by the California Nurses Assn. and Harvey Rosenfield (Prop. 103). Benefactors include trial lawyers ($190,000 from the group who opposed March's Prop. 200, 201, 202).

On the Anti Side: see Prop. 214.

Prop. 217

Top Income Tax Brackets. Reinstatement. Revenues to Local Agencies.

Would retroactively reinstate highest tax rates of 10 and 11 percent on residents with taxable income over $100,000 and $200,000, respectively. Would allocate such revenues among local agencies in accordance with each agency's proportionate share of property tax revenue.

Likely Intent: In 1973, California's top income earners were taxed at 10 or 11 percent. In 1987, the top rate was dropped to 9.3 percent, in accordance with the federal government's 1986 tax overhaul. Finally, in 1991, the state's recession caused state revenue shortages, which prompted the governor and Legislature to temporarily increase in the top tax rate for five years. The five years is up. The California Tax Reform Association would instead like to see the tax continue.

Possible Impacts: higher taxes for the rich (less than 1 percent of Californians), $860 million for schools and local governments.

Big Spenders:

On the Pro Side: mostly government employee groups

On the Anti Side: California Chamber of Commerce and the National Federation of Independent Businesses

Endorsements: California Federation of Teachers, Peace Officers Research Assn., League of Women Voters, SEIU, Sierra Club.

Prop. 218

Voter Approval for Local Government Taxes. Limitations on Fees, Assessments and Charges.

Would require voter approval for increases in general taxes and two-thirds majority for special taxes. Assessments, fees and charges would be submitted to property owners for approval or rejection, after notice and public hearing.

Likely Intent: To make it harder for government to levy or increase taxes.

Possible Impacts:

Would make it more difficult for local governments to maintain levels of service. Would increase control of property owners over local government.

Endorsements: Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Assn., Paul Gann's Citizens Committee, California Taxpayers Assn. Opposed by League of Women Voters, California Teachers Assn., Peace Officers Research Assn., California Police Chiefs' Assn., Sierra Club.

Cheryl Cohen, Greg Eichelberger, Joe Naïman, Howard Owens, Susanne Riddle-Haslinger, Steven Saint, Mistie Shaw, Ninette Sosa and Paul Treske contributed to this election issue.
